Lan-Tech has serviced the legal market since 1993 and many of our system integrators have backgrounds working in law firms. As such, we can bring together the knowledge of law firm operations with today's technology. No other company has the combination of experience in law firm operations, network support and legal software applications. All three are crucial to a law firm's successful use of today's technology.

Over a decade of professional service to law firms

Lan-Tech is not just another networking company.

While we support Microsoft and Novell networks, we also have a strong focus on legal software. This is important because many of the legal software packages require special settings on differing networks for speed and stability. While most network vendors are good at designing a generic network, they often overlook important details when it comes to supporting a network of specialized legal applications.

Lan-Tech has network engineers as well as staff certified in many of the legal software packages. We can increase the performance and stability of the technology tools your firm will use. An improper network configuration can lead to your valuable investment in legal software and data being inefficient or possibly even becoming corrupted.

Could your network vendor install legal applications? Perhaps they could, but should they? Legal applications are a major investment in both time and money. Lan-Tech specializes in installing, maintaining and training users on legal applications.

Could your legal applications specialist install your software on a network? Perhaps they could - but most legal application specialists do not have the knowledge to make the appropriate network changes to maximize the application's performance.

Why pay double to retain the services of the legal applications specialist and a separate network vendor? Lan-Tech will save you time, money and frustration as a one stop solution provider. There are no others who can match our expertise.

But don't take our word for it ... listen to our clients:

"We should be thankful that we have one of the best computer support firms [Lan-Tech] in terms of technical expertise in Atlanta."
